

Scott Egler to lead marketing for Aquilon Energy Services

LISLE, Ill. — Jan 24, 2018 — Aquilon Energy Services recently hired Scott Egler as its vice president of marketing. Aquilon’s Energy Settlement Network[®] is a cloud-based platform, built in partnership with major energy industry players, that enables organizations to collaboratively settle energy transactions. In his role, Egler will develop and execute the firm’s marketing strategy.

“Scott brings valuable marketing leadership to our firm,” said Jeffrey Wagner, founder and CEO of Aquilon. “His strategic approach to marketing will help further establish the Energy Settlement Network as the industry standard and drive global growth.”

Prior to joining Aquilon, Egler led marketing for the supply chain and operations practice within Accenture Strategy. He brings more than three decades of experience in marketing strategy development, content creation and digital promotion to Aquilon.

“I joined Aquilon because I was impressed by the innovation the firm is bringing to the energy industry,” Egler said. “I’m excited to build and execute a marketing strategy that will generate greater awareness of the significant value that ESN[™] offers to energy companies.”

Aquilon’s Energy Settlement Network, which was named the 2017 Innovation of the Year by Energy Risk magazine, helps energy companies accurately predict cash flow, increase security of confidential information, and reduce the number of both short paid invoices and delayed payments. ESN enables settlement teams to support growth and more easily manage a large volume of transactions.

In 2017, Aquilon raised $19 million during a Series B financing round. This included investments from Citi, Goldman Sachs Principal Strategic Investments, Invenergy and Macquarie Group. In addition to investing, all four companies have joined ESN.
